ABSTRACT

The title of this thesis is "Sufiks Pembentuk nomina dalam dua novel karya Jules Verne: Satu Kajian Morfosemantis". This thesis analyses the formation of nouns in English which can be classified in two ways of word forming: 1) orthography and 2) meaning of the word forming. In this study, the process of forming nouns is limited only to one process of affixation that is suffixation. This study aims 1) at describing the types of suffixes that play a role in the formation of nouns in English, by seeking at the changes that occur in the process of forming nouns and then 2) at determining the meaning of the words that have been added by suffix. The method used in this research is descriptive analysis. This method attempts to describe the state of the facts, which produced a portrait of its subject matter or exposure as they are. The data are taken from two novels, "Journey to the center of the Earth" and "The Moon Voyage" written by Jules Verne. The results of this study show that there are fourteen types of suffixes which contribute in the formation of nouns and the suffixes formed in a language is embedded in the basic words that can form new words with the following process: 1) Deverbal process, 2) Dejectival process, and 3) Denominal process.
